Seaforth World Naval Review 2015

Synopsis

Now in its seventh year, this annual has established an international reputation as an authoritative but affordable single volume summary of all the developments in the naval world over the previous twelve months. It combines regional surveys with one-off major articles on noteworthy new ships and other important developments. Besides the latest warship projects, it also looks at wider issues of importance to navies, such as aviation and electronics, and calls on experts from around the globe to give a balanced picture of what is going on and to interpret its significance. There are technological reviews dealing with naval aviation by Davis Hobbs, and current mine warfare developments by Norman Friedman, while warship recycling is discussed by Ian Buxton. Intended to make interesting reading as well as providing authoritative reference, it contains specially commissioned drawings and the most up-to-date photographs.

Customer Reviews

Outstanding and will be the new rival to Janes. Not so big as Janes but more background detail on different naval topics. The graphics are outstanding.

This is the new standard for naval reviews. The writing is good, the information is authoritative and the photos are excellent. This is the first volume of the series I have read. It reviews naval matters (including trends, budgets and related) for various areas of the world, and has accounts of varying length of specific navies. Would you believe that Myanmar has an up and coming navy? Area reviews concentrate largely on the big ones of course--in Asia, that would be China. India, Japan and South Korea but also smaller navies such as Indonesia's. Many seem to be concentrating on patrol of their EEZ areas, enforcing regulations and perhaps to anti-pirate coalitions. The technology of anti-ship missiles means that even smaller navies can pack a punch. Each volume has an extensive fleet review, in this volume on France. France is the only other nation than the US that maintains a world naval presence. There are also several examinations of significant ship types. In this 2015 Review edition, that includes a class of Italian corvettes, the Samuel Beckett patrol vessels being built for Ireland, Norway's (rather remarkable) fast attack craft, up to 60 knots/hour. And there's a mobile offshore base, a developing technology related to prepositioning materials needed for US Marine expeditionary forces. Lastly there are technical reviews on world naval aviation, mine warfare and warship recycling (scrapping, mostly). Unmanned aircraft are becoming very very important.

great book, top notch photos, good coverage of world naval event
