

The book was found

Mao's Great Famine

Synopsis

Between 1958 and 1962, 45 million Chinese people were worked, starved or beaten to death. Mao Zedong threw his country into a frenzy with the Great Leap Forward. It led to one of the greatest catastrophes the world has ever known. Dikotter's extraordinary research within Chinese archives brings together for the first time what happened in the corridors of power with the everyday experiences of ordinary people. This groundbreaking account definitively recasts the history of the People's Republic of China.

Book Information

Audible Audio Edition

Listening Length: 15 hours and 15 minutes

Program Type: Audiobook

Version: Unabridged

Publisher: Whole Story Audiobooks

Audible.com Release Date: January 1, 2012

Whispersync for Voice: Ready

Language: English

ASIN: B006RZG8NU

Best Sellers Rank: #45 in Books > Audible Audiobooks > History > Asia #109 in Books > History > Asia > China

Customer Reviews

This important and very revealing book is a serious effort to enhance understanding of the horrendous famine resulting from the Great Leap Forward of the last 1950s and early 1960s. In reading this book, it's important to understand DiKotter's method with its strengths and limitations. A complete and systematic narrative and analysis of the Great Leap Forward is not possible at this time. Much of the key documentation is hidden in closed archives in China and will probably remain inaccessible until the Communist Party loses its political monopoly. DiKotter pursued documents related to the Great Leap Forward in a number of less tightly guarded provincial archives. This effort produced a number of revealing documents generated by provincial party and government (often the same thing) officials, and copies of important documents from the central party-government apparatus. Supplemented by prior secondary sources and some other archival research, DiKotter was able to assemble a great deal of revealing information about the Great Leap Forward. Since DiKotter's approach is driven heavily by his archival research, this book often has an anecdotal quality, though DiKotter supplements his vignettes with some background narrative and analysis. The cumulative effect of DiKotter's reliance on his primary sources is, however, a powerful and devastating exposure of the dimensions of this tragedy and the culpability of the Chinese Communist Party. DiKotter takes pains to rebut the common impression that the famine of the Great Leap Forward was the inadvertent consequence of a terribly mistaken policy exacerbated by bad weather. DiKotter shows very well that the famine and its accompanying events go well beyond simple criminal negligence.

Frank DiKotter has written a masterpiece about history's greatest monster and mass murderer ever to have lived. To be precise, he describes the massed and forcible collectivization of the Chinese peasants who paid a horrible price in the process: over 45 million of them died in addition to the many more tens of millions who perished as well because of one man's mad scheme to bring change to his country, no matter what the price ought to be. This was the so-called Great Leap Forward and it happened during 4 years, between 1958-1962. To quote DiKotter: "China descended into hell. Mao Zedong threw his country into a frenzy... (which was) an attempt to catch up with and overtake Britain in less than fifteen years. In pursuit of a utopian paradise, everything was collectivized and people in the countryside were robbed of their work, their homes, their land, their belongings and their livelihood." (See Introduction) To write this book, thousands of new documents hitherto classified were used. These came from many sources, mainly from the Office of Foreign Affairs and other provincial archives. These brutal acts caused the greatest demolition of real estate in history and one third of all housing was turned into rubble. "Homes were pulled down to make fertilizers, to build canteens, to relocate villagers, to straighten roads, to make place for a better future beckoning ahead or simply to punish their owners". But not all the people died of hunger. Many would suffer from common illnesses such as diarrhoea, dysentery and typhus. "Suicide reached epidemic proportions and in Puning, Guangdong, suicides were described as 'ceaseless' ; some people ended their lives out of shame for having stolen from fellow villagers." (p.304) What's more, "human flesh was traded on the black market.

Download to continue reading...

Mao's Great Famine Robert Whyte's 1847 Famine Ship Diary: The Journey of an Irish Coffin Ship
Mao: The Unknown Story Mao Zedong Poems The Thought of Mao Tse-Tung (Contemporary China Institute Publications) Mao's Last Dance On Practice and Contradiction (Revolutions Series): Slavoj Zizek presents Mao The Secret Piano: From Mao's Labor Camps to Bach's Goldberg Variations
Mao's Last Dance (Movie Tie-In) Quotations From Chairman Mao Tse-Tung Red China Blues: My

Long March From Mao to Now Madame Mao: The White-Boned Demon: Revised Edition Mao's Last Dancer, Young Readers' Edition Gymnastics: Great Moments, Records, and Facts: Great Moments, Records, and Facts (Great Sports) Great Writing 1: Great Sentences for Great Paragraphs Audubon Birdhouse Book: Building, Placing, and Maintaining Great Homes for Great Birds Stories of the Great Hymns: Short Sessions on the Creation of the Great Hymns with Simplified Arrangements The Northern Lights: Lighthouse of the Upper Great Lakes (Great Lakes Books Series) 2017 Great Quotes from Great Leaders Boxed Calendar 2016 Great Quotes from Great Leaders Boxed Calendar

Dmca