Customer Reviews

There's nothing new in this book and NO, they are not secrets, BUT plenty of good material and anecdotes which may help the budding, and the experienced presenter become much, much better. Gallo has worked in communications for much of his life and brings a rich litany of anecdotes and personalities to illustrate his "secrets." Some of his ten secrets include: Passion: The more likely you increase your "PQ" - Passion Quotient, the more likely you are to connect with your audience. Preparation: For his first budget speech as mayor of New York, in February 1994, Rudy Giuliani started his preparation the previous October. Clarity: Former G.E. chief Jack Welch demanded simplicity from his executives. Command Presence: Good body language conveys confidence. The author has either studied or interviewed a number of very well known celebrities for this work, including Howard Schultz (Starbucks), John Chambers (Cisco), Carly Fiorino (late of HP) and Arnold Schwarzenegger by whom he is particularly smitten. He also provides coaching drills at the end of each chapter for the serious speech student. Some coaching drills suggest visiting Gallo's website [...] to see video clips of great presenters. I couldn't find these, but the site does contain a number of interesting articles which he has written and which add to the good content in his book. One intriguing little criticism I have of a book that I check-list now and again when preparing a speech - the front cover. One of Gallo's secrets is "Clarity," - Lose the Jargon or Lose your audience. Now, I appreciate that the author may not have had control over the cover, but it is a terribly cluttered design featuring up to twelve (yes, 12) different fonts.
